Training Philosophy

Our methods are based on the science of behavior modification and we strive to stay current with the latest findings in training. Our goal is to give you effective tools to help you enjoy the company of your dog.

There is a difference

Good dog training starts with getting to know your dog. Once you better understand what your dog is communicating through their body language and behavior, it offers you the opportunity to understand how the world looks from their perspective.

The relationship

The bond you build with your dog can be strengthened or weakened by your communication. The relationship should reflect a cooperative partnership and have a reinforcing history. Communication should be clear and constructive, building on your dog's confidence and ability to succeed.

Trust

This is the most important aspect. A dog that trusts you and your intentions will eagerly participate with you. When your dog feels safe, it opens the door for learning. Let's find your dog's strengths and build an eager, willing response to your cues.
